Press Release

Odyssey Systems Awarded PASS Task Order valued at $29.5 Million over 5 years

The Odyssey team will provide expert Advisory and Assistance Support Services to the 642 Electronic Systems Squadron.

Wakefield, MA, March 24, 2008: Odyssey Systems Consulting Group was recently awarded a Professional Acquisition Support Services (PASS) Task Order contract to provide advisory and assistance support services to the U.S. Air Force Electronic Systems Center's (ESC) 642 Electronic Systems Squadron (642 ELSS). This task order will provide the full range of program planning, acquisition, administrative, human resources, contracting, and financial management support required by the 642 ELSS in the performance of their worldwide Force Protection mission. The program efforts range from site surveys and analyses of existing bases, installation or modification of security systems at bases and technology development to support force protection efforts.

Odyssey CEO Michael Sweat commented: "The worldwide force protection efforts of the 642 Electronic Systems Squadron save American and allied lives, and we're proud to support this important mission. We look forward to further enhancing the exceptional government-industry collaboration for force protection technologies, and helping the 642 ELSS to maintain their position as the force protection material developer of choice for the Warfighter."

Odyssey Director of Defense and Security Services Director Michael Prisco commented: "This award is an affirmation of Odyssey's history of providing exceptional support to ESC 642 ELSS. The services we deliver will be a critical part of this client's mission to support the Warfighter".
